

DECISION GIVEN IN LIBRARY CASE

Judge Held Complaint Was Good and Overruled Demurrer Filed by the County Auditor.

SIX CENT LEVY IS DEMANDED

Further Action May Not be Taken—
Other Cases Decided in Jackson
Circuit Court.

Unless some further action is taken the levy for the Seymour library will be 6 cents on the $100 instead of 4 cents as provided for in the ordinance which was recently passed by the city council. The library board filed a notice with the city clerk before the levy was fixed demanding a levy of 6 cents, but the council did not grant the request and as result a suit was filed to mandate the county auditor, W. A. Wacker, to place the 6 cent levy upon the tax duplicates.

The board was represented by Judge John M. Lewis and Mr. Wacker was represented by the city attorney, O. O. Swails. A demurrer was filed by the county attorney to the complaint of a library board, but the demurrer was overruled which virtually means that the levy of 6 cents will be placed upon the tax duplicates. It is possible that the county attorney may take some further action in the case, although no announcement of this fact has been made.

The council refused to make the levy 6 cents as demanded by the library board as it believed that the state law, which gives the library boards of the various cities the right to fix any levy not to exceed 10 cents on the $100, would not affect the local library. The council proceeded upon the theory that the institution here was the gift of Andrew Carnegie upon the condition that the city pay $1,000 each year to maintain it. Since the library has been built the city has given $1,200 and the township $300.

During the past year the library was maintained upon a 4 cent levy, but the board contended that it was handicapped in purchasing books, maintaining the building and making improvements needed upon this levy and for that reason asked for a 6 cent levy. Under the new levy several hundred dollars will be raised in addition to the funds received under the present levy.

Action has been taken on quite a number of circuit court cases during the past few days and it is expected that considerable business will be transacted during the remaining weeks of the term. A number of cases have been determined and a few have been dismissed.

The case of the State of Indiana against Ulysses G. Glidewell for issuing a fraudulent check has been set for December 17. This case has been pending for several terms and was called a few days ago, but was postponed upon the motion of the defendant.

The State case against Fred Mackey in which the defendant was charged with assault and battery with intent was dismissed.

The case in which Bruce Trowbridge was charged with grand larceny was dismissed upon the motion of the prosecuting attorney. A new case has been filed against the defendant, however, and he is charged with having received stolen goods.

James B. Murphy, plaintiff in a suit for a note, against Laura B. Robertson, et al. was given judgment in the sum of $105.50.

Ottoway H. Van Glider was given a verdict of $225 against John W. Reymann for damages.

In the suit of Marion A. Weddell against Martha A. Grantham, et al. for artition Samuel Carr, Holmes Robertson and D. H. Tormoehlen were appointed commissioners.

The case of F. W. Wesner against Mary L. Browning for breach of contract has been venue to Orange county. The case was filed in the Lawrence circuit court and was later venue to this county.

The case of John H. Fricke vs. Thomas A. Fawbush, account, has been set for December 23.

James F. McCurdy, August Mitchell and Clark B. Davis were appointed commissioners in the case of George F. Rodert et al. for a drain.

Samuel Green pleaded guilty to the charge of intoxication and was fined $1 and costs. This case was first heard in the city court.

Rosina Wolf was granted a divorce from Henry Wolf and given the custody of the children.

In the case of Maude Winkler against William H. Winkler for divorce the defendant was ordered to pay $15.

A divorce was granted to Eliza J. Shelton who brought suit against Frank Shelton.

Peter Shelton has filed a suit for divorce from Susan Shelton.

A remonstrance was filed in the case of William P. Rider, et al., ex parte proceeding for a drain, by Arthur B. Foster, et al.

The case of the U. S. Trust Company administrator, against J. W. Cunningham has been dismissed.

The case of Garry Preggy vs. Frank Falk and William Phifer on note was set for November 15.

William Clark and August Cordes were appointed appraisers in the case of Rolla D. Emig vs. James E. Neal for an accounting.

William J. Stone has filed suit against John Loraine et al. to quiet title.

Henry H. Crawford vs. Edmond Robertson et al. foreclosure of mechanics lien.

Parents-Teachers Association.

A little over a year ago a Parents-Teachers Association was organized, and the meetings held were of such mutual benefit that it seems desirable to continue them this year. In answer to the requests that have come, the first meeting will be held tomorrow, Thursday evening, at seven o'clock, in the assembly room of Shields high school. All parents and any interested are cordially invited to be present. The parents of the students in the advanced grades and high school are especially urged to be present, as some questions of vital interest to parents and teachers will be discussed. There will be every effort to make the meetings interesting and the support and cooperation of each parent is needed.

TEST CASE FILED IN CIRCUIT COURT

Dr. George B. Rader, Osteopath, is Charged With Practicing Medicine Without a License.

DENIES PRESCRIBING DRUGS

Similar Cases Have Been Filed in Other Counties—Supreme Court
May Decide Contention.

A case which will test the Indiana Medical law has been filed in the Jackson circuit court. Dr. George B. Rader, who represents the Spauln-hurst Osteopaths in this city, is the defendant in the suit and is charged with practicing medicine without a license. Similar cases have been filed in several counties and it is probable that the case in Jackson county, or in one of the other counties, will be taken to the Supreme Court.

The case is based upon a section of the Indiana Medical law which provides that a medical student, who is an undergraduate, may practice without a license provided he does so under the supervision of a licensed physician. Dr. Rader is an undergraduate within the terms of the law, but is within four months of graduation from the American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo. He also spent two years at the University of South Carolina. Dr. Spauln-hurst is a well known osteopath in this state and has a number of branch offices in the smaller cities.

It is said that the cases will be defended upon two grounds, first, that an osteopath does not prescribe drugs and is therefore not practicing under the state medical law. It is also contended that the Spauln-hurst Osteopaths are practicing under the direct supervision of Dr. Spauln-hurst at Indianapolis and if it is shown that they are within the law they are not violating any of its provisions. The state contends that as the office is in charge of undergraduates and the patients are not seen by Dr. Spauln-hurst they are not under his direct supervision. The cases have not yet come to trial, but will likely be tried upon an agreed statement of facts.

The state medical board has filed several cases against the school. The osteopaths have a representative on the state board in the person of Dr. Spauln-hurst, but it is understood that they prefer to have a separate state board such as has been provided for in several other states. The cases have attracted considerable interest throughout the state and if the contention of the state medical board is maintained, quite a number of the osteopaths, who are practicing in the smaller cities, would not be permitted to continue their practice.

DEMOCRATS HOLD A JOLLIFICATION

With Band and Plenty of Fireworks
Show That They Are Pleased
With Result of Election.

AUTOMOBILES IN THE PARADE

Pictures of Successful Candidates
For Several Hours.

The democratic rally and jollification took place on scheduled time Tuesday night with a display of fireworks, music by the band, shouts, sounding of automobile whistles and various other noises. The jollification was left almost completely in the care of Marion Weddell and Simon Eacret and the local democrats have been congratulating them today upon the successful manner in which they arranged and conducted the affair. The expense of the jollification was paid by contributions of the party workers and a considerable part of the money was used in fireworks.

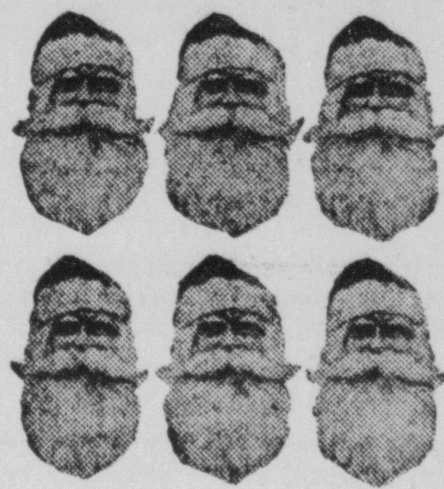

A generous supply of red fire, Roman candles and other fireworks were procured and were distributed among the participants of the rally. Four or five automobiles assembled in front of the Majestic theatre and formed in line for the parade. A number of the prominent leaders of democracy occupied the seats of honor in the machines and carried the fireworks and banners.

A number of banners were printed by the marshals in chief for the evening and none of the banners attracted more attention than the one carried by Simon Eacret, which read "A General House Cleaning." Incidentally it is said Eacret desires to be minister to Turkey. It was noticeable that a number of the democrats who want government jobs took an active interest in the jollification and were loud in their praises over President-elect Woodrow Wilson, and all the other national, state, district and county leaders who will have influence in sorting out the various jobs.

The automobiles paraded over the principal streets of the city but for some time after the line was broken the sound of the horns and the shouting could be heard. The pictures of Wilson and Marshall had a conspicuous place in the parade, and several banners directed "shots" at local republicans and bull moosers. This was the first jollification the democrats have had for about twenty years and all of them were in excellent spirits for the event.

It is reported that one of the automobiles that took part in the parade caught fire from the fireworks and the top was damaged before the flames could be extinguished. Some of the sparks fell on the top and were fanned into flames before they were noticed. During the evening a spark from one of the Roman candles struck a small boy in the eye, but his injury was not serious.

Mrs. James Cunningham of Brownstown was here this afternoon on her way to Crothersville where she was called by the serious illness of her nephew, John Jenkins.

CALVERT KNEW JOHN KELLEY

Two Men Were About Same Size and Resembled Each Other.

There has been much speculation as to whether the letter regarding Charles Calvert, the forger of Scott county and supposed to have been written by his alleged wife, is genuine. A number of persons believe that the communication was written by Calvert himself in order to find out if he would be prosecuted in case he returned to his home town.

One of the indications that the letter is genuine, is the name taken by Calvert after he left Scottsburg. It seems that since his disappearance from this section of the state he has been going under the assumed name of John Kelley. It appears that there was a man by that name who formerly lived in Scott county and was an acquaintance of Calvert. Kelley later engaged in the contracting business and moved to Jeffersonville. He died about the time Calvert disappeared.

Kelley was about the same height and weighed about the same as Calvert, and it is said that people who were not acquainted personally with the two men would have difficulty in distinguishing them. People who knew Mr. Kelley say that this is good evidence that the letter purported to be from Calvert's wife is genuine.

WALSH ESTATE SUED

University of Illinois Asks For Sum of $10,000.

The University of Illinois has instituted a suit for $10,000 against the estate of the late John R. Walsh, for the recovery of rentals for which the exbanker stood security.

Several years ago the University of Illinois, then renting the College of Physicians and Surgeons, sub-rented a portion of a building at the corner of Twelfth street and Michigan avenue in Chicago, to the Ft. Dearborn Medical College.

Dr. Baldwin signed the lease and his father-in-law, John R. Walsh, guaranteed the payment of the rents. The college failed and the head, Dr. Baldwin, took the bankrupt law. Walsh died, and the only thing left for the University of Illinois to do is to try and regain the $10,000 or hold the sack.

Merit Will Tell.

A half century ago in a Massachusetts town Rice & Hutchins commenced in a small way to make shoes, good shoes, good shoes only. They put their name on them and stood back of them. The people bought and found they got better service than they had been getting—Result constant patronage. Presently they had to enlarge their factory in order to turn out more shoes for which they had found a demand, this demand increased until today they operate eight large factories making shoes for every member of the family. The people are so used to being cheated that when they find an honest man they make him rich. Rice & Hutchins became rich and the business they founded is of the greatest in history.

SCORE OF PERSONS INJURED

Dying Passengers Who Were Caught in the Wrecking Cried Pitifully to Bystanders for Water.

Indianapolis, Nov. 13.—Sixteen persons were killed and a score of others injured at 3 o'clock this morning, when C. H. & D. passenger train No. 29, running at a speed of forty miles an hour, ran into an open switch at Arlington avenue and the C. H. & D. railroad tracks, and crashed into a freight train which was standing on a siding.

The engines met head-on and one engineer is believed to be buried in the mass of wreckage. Willis Work, 210 North Addison street, engineer of the freight train, escaped death by jumping.

York landed in a barbed wire fence and was painfully cut about the legs. Four members of a family of six, who were on their way to a log camp in Wisconsin, from their home in Jackson, Ky., were killed, and the other two members were seriously injured.

Most of the dead were found in the first passenger car, which was telescoped with the baggage car. One engineer is believed to be in the mass of wreckage, as well as one of the conductors. Firemen and police worked with axes for more than two hours before the first body in the passenger car was uncovered.

One of the first acts of the firemen was to cut a hole in the top of the car and pass water to the injured passengers, who were crying pitifully for aid.

There was an almost complete telescope of the two engines. They reared up toward each other. It was not until daylight that one of the engineers was discovered in the wreckage of his cab, sealed to death.

The baggage car was badly splintered, but the two passenger cars just behind it were damaged worse. They looked more like a big heap of kindling than railroad cars. The passenger cars were telescoped like the engines.

The entrances between the cars were so filled with wreckage and joined with each other that it was impossible to rescue the dead and injured through them. The heavy tender of one of the locomotives was thrown clear out on the main track by the impact.

All of the city and private ambulances in Indianapolis were called to the scene and the injured were taken to the Deaconess hospital as rapidly as they could be moved.

The freight car behind the freight locomotive was loaded with buggy wheels which were thrown out over the tracks.

Persons in the neighborhood of the wreck say the wreckage was burning when they first got to it, but that the fire was soon put out.

COLDS DO NOT CAUSE CATARRH BAD BLOOD DOES

A cold will usually aggravate the symptoms of Catarrh, just as it may increase the pains of Rheumatism. But the cold has no more to do with the real cause of the one than with the other. Bad blood is the underlying cause for Catarrh; the circulation is infected with impurities which are deposited into the mucous membranes causing inflammation and irritation, followed by excessive secretion of the nose and throat, roaring sounds in the ears, neuralgia, inflamed eyes, etc. Being a deep-seated blood trouble, Catarrh must be treated constitutionally, for it is beyond the reach of local treatment. The blood must be purified—the cause removed before a cure can be effected. S. S. S. cures Catarrh by cleansing the blood of all impure catarrhal matter and at the same time building up the system by its fine tonic effects. In other words S. S. S. cures the trouble by supplying the mucous membranes with healthy, life-giving blood instead of saturating them with catarrhal impurities. ## Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

BEWARE.

Of the unspoken word I am master, but the spoken word is master of me.

How true it is! So long as the word is unspoken it is your servant. Speak it and it is your tyrant. The spoken thing is a thing alive. Once uttered, it is born. And you cannot kill it.

Two friends quarrel. One of them forgets himself and the respect due his friend. Losing his self control, he says bitter things. His words are barbed and his friend is stung to the quick.

And then— In a few days, perhaps, the quick tempered speaker meets the other. When he sees his friend the impetuous one regrets his hasty speech. Impulsive in saying the kind word as well as the unkind, he holds out his hand to say: "I beg your pardon. I was wrong and thoughtless. Let us be friends and forget it."

Whereupon the other: "Surely I shall forgive you and with all my heart, but I only wish I could forget. I cannot."

Is he relentless? No. He is frank and honest.

It might be kinder, no doubt, certainly more polite, to stop with forgiveness and say nothing about forgetting. But this man knows that it is impossible to forget. He merely states a fact when he says so.

The tear may be forgotten, But the hurt stays in the heart.

That is it. The hurt stays in the heart. You cut your flesh. It bleeds. The wound finally heals. But there is the scar! Always it will be there to remind you of the wound.

You may shatter the vase and mend it, but the cement will show.

Human hearts are more easily injured than fragile vases or human flesh.

Forget? There is no way to forget. It is a psychological fact that the more you try to forget the more you remember.

Therefore you should be careful of the word that, once uttered, will be your master.

Be careful how you lift the spear of passion to thrust it with clumsy hands into the heart of a friend. You may withdraw the spear and bind up the wound, but—

The scar!

SPAIN STUNNED BY HIGH CRIME

Premier's Assassination Fills People With Horror.

ANARCHIST'S DELIBERATE DEED

With No Other Apparent Motive Than Hate For Government, Senor Canalejas, King Alfonso's Chief Adviser, Was Shot Down on the Streets of Madrid by Young Man, Who Put a Bullet Into His Own Head.

Paris, Nov. 13.—The man who assassinated Premier Canalejas in Madrid is a professor and sculptor. He is known to the police of Paris and Bordeaux as a pronounced anarchist.

Madrid, Nov. 13.—On learning that Premier Jose Canalejas was assassinated in the street when he was going to the ministry of the interior to preside at a cabinet meeting, the city was stunned. The premier, after a conference with King Alfonso, was walking to the Puerto Del Sol, where the ministry is situated. He stopped to scan the books in the window of the San Martin library at the corner of the Calle Carretas and the Puerta. Suddenly a well dressed young man stepped briskly up behind the premier and drew his hand from his pocket, clutching a revolver and firing three or four times in rapid succession.

The premier dropped dying to the sidewalk, shot through the head. Senor Canalejas was usually followed by two detectives, though he insisted that they keep twenty paces to the rear. But they could not have forestalled the sudden act of the assassin. The latter tried to bolt, but the detectives seized him. The man then fired again, but the bullet went wild. Somebody dealt him a blow on the head, and the assassin, realizing that escape was hopeless, used the last round on himself.

The bullet penetrated his head, inflicting a severe wound in the temple. The man was then secured and taken immediately to the nearest first aid depot, where it was found that the bullet had lodged in his skull. In the meantime the premier was lifted from the street by the police and carried into the ministry of the interior. Some persons say he was still alive, but he did not speak and, if alive, he died immediately afterward. The bullet which ended his life entered Senor Canalejas' head behind the right ear and passed out at the temple.

The body of the premier was laid on a marble table in the center hall of the ministry. The bishop of Sion was hastily called and he blessed the body, while the ministers and other prominent persons who were present gathered around. The minister of the interior had telephoned King Alfonso immediately after Senor Canalejas had been shot, and his majesty went hurriedly to the ministry. His face was grave and anxious as he alighted in front of the building. The crowd cheered him tumultuously. After a few hurried questions King Alfonso knelt for a few moments in silent prayer beside the body.

His estimate of Senor Canalejas was a high one and the relations between the two men were intimate. As he stood looking on the calm face of the dead statesman tears came to the eyes of the king. Before returning to the royal palace his majesty conferred informally with the ministers and appointed Marquis Manuel Garcia Prieto, the foreign minister, to take the government helm pending a final selection of a new premier.

The police are extremely secretive. The assassin has been reported dead, but it is believed that he is still alive. His name is Manuel Pardinias Sarelate, to which some statements add the fourth name of Martin. The man's birth certificate was found in his pocket, showing that he was thirty-two years old, and having been born at El Grado, which is in the province of Huesca. Other documents were found, but their contents are not known. It is supposed, rather than really known, that the man was an anarchist.

BERKMAN TALKS

American Anarchist Rejoices at Death of Canalejas.

New York, Nov. 13.—The members of the anarchist groups in this city did not hesitate to say that they were highly pleased with the assassination of Jose Canalejas, premier of Spain, by a supposed anarchist, and their leaders said that they regarded it as a matter of rejoicing. Alexander Berkman, the anarchist who served fourteen years for shooting Henry C. Frick, said that all the anarchists were glad to hear of the assassination and that it would be looked on by the anarchists over the world as an event to congratulate themselves on. "I consider that the assassination of the Spanish premier should have taken place long ago," he said.

THE BAPTISTS HAVE REVISED THE BIBLE

Scriptures Now Conform to Their Teachings.

Philadelphia, Nov. 13.—At the American Baptist Publication society rooms here what is regarded as probably the most radical version of the Holy Bible has been placed on sale. It is a Baptist Bible for Baptists only, and is so startling in some of its translations that much of the old text has been entirely changed.

According to the scholars of the Baptist church who have spent thirty years in its preparation, it is uncompromisingly faithful in its translation from the original and, according to the teachings of the church, gives a more faithful and exact translation of the old Greek and Hebrew scriptures. For example, in that portion of the New Testament where the conversion of the Savior is described, in place of using the Greek "baptize" the literal translation "immerse" is used so as to conform with the Baptist teachings that Christ went down into the water for his baptism.

Archaic Forms Eliminated.

All of the archaic forms of the King James and revised versions have been completely eliminated and little of the old-fashioned respect for generally accepted theological views and ecclesiastical teachings remains.

The new Bible is called the "Improved Version" and is as distinctly different from the old scriptures so long the accepted creed of all Protestant denominations that practically no other church but the Baptists will be able to use it, because it interprets the scriptures to mean solely what the Baptist church teaches. There are hundreds of new words which are explained as the actual translation of the original scriptures.

Rev. Philip L. Jones, the editor of the publication society, is responsible for this new Bible, that for Baptists practically revolutionizes the old scriptures.

A CLEAR DENIAL

Bitten Investors Were Not Lured on by Government Reports.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Investigations made here not only fail to bear out, but in a large measure contradict charges by Americans who investigated an "alluring" diamond mine scheme in Brazil, that the exploiters were assisted by reports of United States consular officers to the state department and by an article published in the bulletin of the Pan-American union. United States officials say that if anybody has been "lured" it certainly is not because the United States authorities have failed to issue warnings.

The consular reports specifically mentioned by the Americans who discovered the "shady" nature of the mines in which they were asked to invest, contain direct and specific warnings to Americans against fake concerns claiming to have valuable diamond mines in Brazil. Furthermore, John Barrett, director of the Pan-American union, declares that he has repeatedly warned Americans against investing in diamond mining propositions in Brazil without first making an investigation.

Struggling Forward to the Last Defenses of Constantinople, King Ferdinand's Victorious Army Apparently Is Awaiting the Arrival of Heavy Artillery Before Battering Down the Gateway to the City.

Constantinople, Nov. 13.—There is a report in circulation to the effect that the porte has asked Bulgaria to grant an armistice. The report has not been confirmed as yet.

London, Nov. 13.—Struggling for the last defenses of Constantinople, the Bulgars are apparently awaiting the arrival of their heavy artillery before they take the last step of the journey, which they hope will bring them into Constantinople. Nazim Pasha, behind the Tchataldja forts, is holding grimly to this last position left him, judging from the vague reports from the front, and is making an unexpectedly strong resistance.

There are constant rumors that more of the Tchataldja forts have fallen to the Bulgarians, but none of these has been verified. From the shores of the Marmora sea to the south of the Tchataldja lines, comes word that there a Bulgar column is maneuvering.

The Turks, so long bottled up by the Montenegrins in Tarakash on the shores of Lake Scutari, attempted a sortie, driven out by cold and hunger. The shells of the Montenegrins forced them back, however.

There is continued assurance by cable that the Americans in both the missionary buildings and colleges in plague-stricken Constantinople are safe. Two United States fighting ships are now on their way to look after their safety, and both Great Britain and Russia have promised to look after the safety of Americans in the Levant.

King George of Greece yesterday arrived in the city of Salonika, which the Greeks wrested from the Turks. The Greek army's reception was wildly enthusiastic. The soldiers and the people of the city made the hills ring with their welcome to their monarch. After driving through the city the king, attired in the full uniform of generalissimo, proceeded to the cathedral, where a Te Deum was sung. Among those who cheered the king were Bulgarian troops under General Todoroff, who entered the city with his army on Saturday.

The Servians are finding but little trouble in the government of their conquered land. They have promised the Albanians law, justice and honesty and peaceful lives under the reign of King Peter.

The shooting of the Egyptian Prince Aziz by the Turks for his alleged failure as head of the Turkish cavalry at Kirk-Killisseh has caused the greatest indignation among the Egyptian Mohammedans, and the brother of the dead prince, Prince Ibrahim, who was preparing to leave for Constantinople, has decided not to fight for the sultan.

In the meantime the diplomats are struggling with the problem of calming Austria, indignant because of the Serbs' advance to the Adriatic. From all the powers come words of moderation and the offer of a general conference over the Balkan situation at the close of the war at which the differences can be smoothed down, is put forth by Germany.

The dead include William Halpin, foreman; Charles Schmidt, C. O. Carlson and three unidentified workmen. At least thirty persons were injured, some of them seriously, it is stated. Mrs. William Diamond of Miller was seriously cut by flying glass. She was thrown violently to the ground, suffering internal injuries.

Fight Over Card Game.

Hammond, Ind., Nov. 13.—While entertaining a party of friends at a card game Philip Miotka and Frank Debor became involved in an altercation and both men may die as a result of the fight. While Debor was kicking Miotka in the ribs the latter was slashing Debor with a razor.

Trapper Slain in Cabin.

PAST DIFFERENCES HAPPILY FORGOTTEN

North and South Gather On Common Soil.

Washington, Nov. 13.—In a speech at Continental hall to the Daughters of the Confederacy, who laid the cornerstone for a monument to General R. E. Lee and the Confederate dead in Arlington cemetery, President Taft made his first public reference to the incoming Democratic administration. The president spoke of Gov. Wilson as "my worthy and distinguished successor," and said that Governor Wilson will have a great opportunity to remove the last faint traces of sectional feeling in this country. The president added impressively that Mr. Wilson would use this opportunity for the benefit of the whole nation.

William J. Bryan was one of the orators at the laying of the Lee monument cornerstone. He was cordially received, but it remained for a crippled old Union soldier to evoke real enthusiasm.

Corporal James Tanner was cheered and cheered by the 5,000 daughters and the veterans of the lost cause who gathered to venerate the memory of their loved leader. "It is almost fifty years," said the trembling veteran, "since that bloody conflict, and for me fifty years of great physical suffering. Only we who fought and suffered on either side can know the depth of the feeling today between the Johnny Reb and the Yankee who faced each other then, and that makes us brothers now."

"We who fought want our children to remember that we fought it out then and settled those questions for all time and have handed down to our posterity a perpetuated republic of the United States that shall exist until God himself calls the roll of nations."

The applause and cheers that followed the Union man as he limped off with his cane bespoke the readiness with which his sentiments were welcomed. A moment later the crowd of veterans, men and women, were singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

FIEND PLANNED INFERNAL JOBS

Ortie McManigal, Wrecker, Gives Further Details.

UNDER CAREFUL INSTRUCTION

Getting His Orders From the Headquarters of the Iron Workers' Union, Dynamiter Coolly Proceeded About Execution of Dread Plans With as Much Apparent Calm as Would Mark Any Detail of a Day's Work.

Indianapolis, Nov. 13.—Before Ortie E. McManigal, the star witness in the dynamiting cases, had given full details of the methods he employed in the destruction of property and his communication with officials of the iron workers' union, the sudden illness of one of the jurors caused court to adjourn. He described the consternation of John J. McNamara when he learned that the cache at Rochester, Pa., had been found by someone and fifty-eight quarts of nitroglycerine that the witness had stored had been removed. He disclaimed any knowledge of the removal, and McNamara ordered him to purchase more of the explosive and carry out the program of destruction for which the fifty-eight quarts at Rochester were originally designed.

This was the cache that the district attorney referred to as having been betrayed by Herbert S. Hockin to the representative of an open shop contractor when Hockin, fearing for himself because of the frequency of explosions, was preparing to make his peace with the law by betraying his confederates. The man to whom Hockin revealed the presence of the explosive was Arthur Jewell, representative of the McClintic-Marshall company. McManigal had been sent to the cache to get nitroglycerine for a job in Kansas City, and having been supplied anew by McNamara with explosives and clocks and batteries, he went to Kansas City on Aug. 20, carrying with him in a suitcase twelve quarts of the explosive.

The witness said he had provided himself with a camera, and on the Sunday after reaching his destination he took pictures of a bridge that McClintic-Marshall were building and got one of the watchmen to pose for him at the bridge. He hid the nitroglycerine and several of the clocks. One of the cans he failed to recover, having forgotten where he had buried it. The witness then described the location of the McClintic-Marshall bridge, how he had buried the nitroglycerine in a swamp; how he afterward bought three four-quart cans and, taking them to the place where the nitroglycerine was buried, emptied the explosive into the three cans, throwing away the ten-quart and the two-quart cans.

He made the change, he said, because McNamara desired three explosions. He planted the cans and a clock and a battery on Monday, Aug. 22, he said, but the battery was too weak and there was no explosion. On the following day at the works he recovered the battery and clock, and after testing it out, bought a new battery. That night he attached the new machine to the cans containing eight quarts of nitroglycerine, which remained between two girders, and the explosion came off.

The witness said the explosion was more effective than he had hoped it would be, and one span of the bridge was so badly damaged that it had to be completely rebuilt. He explained that the object of the explosions, as he understood it, was to force non-union contractors to employ union men, and if this were accomplished it mattered little if the destruction was not great.

Continuing, McManigal testified that John J. McNamara had instructed him after doing the Kansas City job, to go to Peoria and see Edward Smythe, business agent of the local there. He found Smythe there and told him that J. J. McNamara had sent him to take a trip through the cornfields. He said Smythe took him across the river along a street bordered by cornfields and through a cornfield to the Peoria & Pekin Union railroad yards. They came to a large pile of steel girders, said the dynamiter.

At this point in the testimony the illness of Juror Spalding was announced and after some inquiry court adjourned for the day.

SHOCKING TALE TOLD TO JURY OF FARMERS

Minnie La Valley Narrates Distressing Experience.

Norwalk, O., Nov. 13.—Miss Minnie La Valley, nineteen years old, blushing at times and glancing apprehensively about the room, told a crowded courtroom how she was seized by a gang of men, stripped and her body covered with tar. The girl, who with her sister and mother, formerly lived at West Clarkfield, this county, appeared as the prosecuting witness in the cases of seven men who were indicted on the charge of attacking her.

After going into details as to the stripping and the tarring, Miss La Valley underwent a scorching cross-examination in which the defense attempted to place before the jury her relations with young men of the village.

Blushing indignantly at the pointed questions, she denied them. After the ordeal, she hinted that unless the men are punished for the attack on her, she would not care to live.

"If they acquit those men there will be nothing left for me but death," she said. "My life would be ruined. I never could hold up my head. I should end it all."

Of the cases against the seven men indicted, Ernest and Harlow Welch, Joseph Cummins, Constable Reginald Thomas, Joseph and Carl Sly and John Smith, former Judge C. P. Wickham selected that of Ernest Welch to try first, as being the most difficult. The La Valley girl claims she identified Welch as one of her assailants. The jury, composed mostly of farmers, seemed much interested in the sensational features of the testimony. Miss La Valley was attacked by a crowd of men last August, after she escorted a girl friend to the West Clarkfield depot.

SNYDER CASE

Parole of Young Snyder Has Been Revoked by Governor Marshall.

Oliver Snyder, the notorious young burglar of Brown county, who was arrested in this city the first of August after an all night's chase, will not be tried in the Jackson circuit court for burglary or any other charge. The officers searched for Snyder several hours before he was arrested and when he was finally sighted by Chief of Police Abell the officer commanded him to halt and when he refused to do so the officer fired and his left leg was so badly injured that amputation was necessary. Snyder was removed to the Jeffersonville Reformatory on the day following his arrest.

The young burglar, who was formerly a school teacher in Brown county, was sentenced to the reformatory about a year before he was paroled. Governor Marshall has revoked his parole, and he will be required to serve out the rest of his twenty year sentence. It was first believed that Snyder would be returned here and would be tried for his crimes in this county, but since the Governor has revoked the license this action is impossible.

Had Snyder been compelled to stand trial here, it is probable that his attorneys would have pleaded insanity and in which case he would likely have been sent to the insane asylum. The official papers revoking the license have been received from the Governor's office and the case is now closed so far as the local officers are concerned.

Commissioners' Court.

The docket of the commissioners' court shows the following business was transacted at the regular session this week:

In the matter of the petition of Henry Hackman, Edw. F. Wolka, et al, for a drain in Driftwood T. P., Wm. Peters and Leonard Hurlington were appointed viewers, and C. M. Beldon, engineer.

In the matter of the petition of David Hogg, et al, for the opening of public highway in Vernon Tp., the viewers reported that same would be of public utility.

The reviewers in the matter of the petition of Tunnis Gurrard, et al, for opening of a highway in Vernon Tp., allowed Elmer Crum $25 damages.

The gravel road contract for the Johnson and Carr gravel road in Hamilton Tps. was awarded to Sylvester Carr for $7,620. There were three other bids, Jas. DeGolyer $7,627.90, Chris Moritz $7,637, D. B. Manion $7,637.90.

Methodist Church.

The revival meetings at the First M. E. church which are conducted by the pastor, Dr. D. L. Thomas, are progressing nicely. The attendance during the week has been large and much interest has been shown. The sermons have been unusually strong. Cottage prayer meetings are held each afternoon and these have been largely attended and very helpful. During the meetings several have requested prayers.

Christian Church.

The series of special meetings at the Christian church are being largely attended each evening. The pastor, Rev. Edward L. Pettus, is preaching an excellent series of sermons and they have been highly commended. The music is in charge of Otis Watson and some special music has been given by the large chorus. The sermon of the Rev. Mr. Pettus tonight upon the subject "The Seven Seals" will be unusually good.

To the Voters of Jackson County:

Without, in any manner whatever, being a candidate, on the 21st day of August, I was nominated for Representative of Jackson County by the Progressive party at its first county convention.

Nevertheless, I am a Progressive and I have no apologies, whatever, to offer for my action in accepting this nomination at the hands of this great twentieth century party. I value a nomination for this party more highly than an election by any boss ridden, party.

Furthermore, I heartily indorse both the national and state platforms. They are two of the most sublimely great political platforms ever promulgated by any party of our country.

And now, I take this method of thanking my friends for their loyal support and the interest manifested in the welfare of one of their candidates in this initial struggle.

We have gained a great victory. The future is ours. We urge all who are tired of boss rule to "jine" us. We don't require any one to lick salt out of our hands, but we do reserve the right to blackball the political bosses when they present their credentials at the wicket. The Progressive party has no place for bosses—we believe the people should rule.

I must say one thing more, viz: In my opinion—based on precedent and outlook—Albert J. Beveridge will be elected president on the Progressive ticket in 1916. J. D. DURMENT.

According to the Mohammedans of southern India, pulverized diamond is the least painful, the most active and the most certain of all poisons. According to "Wilke's History," the powder of diamonds is kept on hand (by the wealthy only presumably) as a last resource. But a belief in the poisonous character of the diamond also existed in Italy in the sixteenth century.

Daily Christmas Hint

An Old Fashioned Gift Again In Vogue

With the revival of old fashions in the world of dress come the household decorations of several decades ago. The wall pocket that used to adorn the dressing table of the belles of the fifties is again in evidence among the new things for Christmas presents.

Particularly attractive is the wall pocket designed for hair combs that is shown in the cut, and for an inexpensive little gift it is admirable.

HEALTHY WOMEN SCARCE

Is the Verdict of Scientific Investigation.

How many women do you know who are perfectly well, strong and healthy as a woman should be? They may not be sick enough to lie in bed—but they are run-down, thin, nervous, tired and debilitated.

Women are so active nowadays, and so much is expected of them, that they constantly overdo and suffer from headache, backache, nervousness and kindred ills.

Such women need Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil which will create an appetite, tone up the digestive organs, make pure blood and create strength.

Mrs. W. G. Ritchie, Patchogue, N. Y., says: "Vinol is certainly the best tonic I have ever taken. I was run-down and tired all the time, but, thanks to Vinol, I am feeling all right again."

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

Just as Well.

Some years ago an engagement was broken off in Howard because, after he had dressed for the ball, he lay down for a few minutes, fell asleep and didn't wake up until past midnight, leaving her to sit around in her fine fix-ups wondering what was the matter. He couldn't square it with her, so he looked around, found another girl, and the offended bride found another man. They both got married, and there are now two happy families where there would have been but one. —Kansas City Journal.

are mosquitoes. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fires of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails; also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But electric Bitters kill and cast out the malaria germs from the blood; gives you a fine appetite and renews your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50 cents at The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind. ## YULETIDE GIFTS FOR THE BABY.

Pretty Things That Will Delight the Heart of His Fond Mother.

Do not fail to remember the baby even should it be his or her first Christmas. Nothing will delight the hearts of parents more than some trifle bestowed upon their darling. So many inexpensive toys or dainty trifles may be fashioned out of bits of silk or lace and other odds and ends that accumulate in the scrap bag that so far as expense is concerned baby's Christmas need cost nothing.

A handy bag in which may be tucked a few toys to amuse the little one when traveling is illustrated here. It may be lined with tiny pockets in which baby's small toilet accessories can be slipped.

Doll and Bag Both.

The bag looks like a doll, the head and arms being dressed in a tiny coat of Dresden ribbon. The lower part has a round flat section of cardboard covered with wide watered silk. The upper part is made of the watered silk or of ribbon stitched to the round of covered pasteboard. A casing with ribbon run through it finishes the neck of the bag, and the two ends of the ribbon are passed through the coat so that it may be drawn down over the bag and tied in place when baby wishes it for a plaything. Being collapsible, the bag may be slipped into a satchel and will take up less room than an ordinary doll.

A Hoop Rattle.

A homemade rattle may be fashioned of ribbon, an embroidery hoop and several tiny tinkling bells. Ribbon is wound around the hoop, crossed from side to side several times and tied in tiny bows, the center of each bow having one of the bells tacked to it. When baby shakes the hoop joyous music is heard and baby is happy.

A sachet cushion of ribbon is a novelty if woven in the birth month colors of the recipient of the gift. This color is combined with white, narrow widths of satin ribbon being used and interlaced as the children make their kindergarten mats. When squares for the top and bottom have been woven these must be stitched together and a silk cord used to outline the edge of the pillow. The pillow may be filled with cotton sprinkled with sachet powder.

Crochet Bottle Cover.

A pretty and useful gift for the baby is a crocheted cover for the nursing bottle.

The glass surface of the bottle is very apt to slip away from an infant that is too young to hold the bottle in place, but if it is covered there will be no difficulty in making it rest comfortably by baby's pillow while he or she is taking food.

Select fine, soft zephyr-white or best-and, using a simple stitch, crochet a case that is long and wide enough to fit over the bottle. Draw up about its neck with a narrow ribbon run through the top. Such a cover can be made of silk or cotton yarn if you wish.

BOYS' HANDICRAFT

By A. NEELY HALL

Author of "Handicraft for Handy Boys" and "The Boy Craftsman"

A BOX KITE.

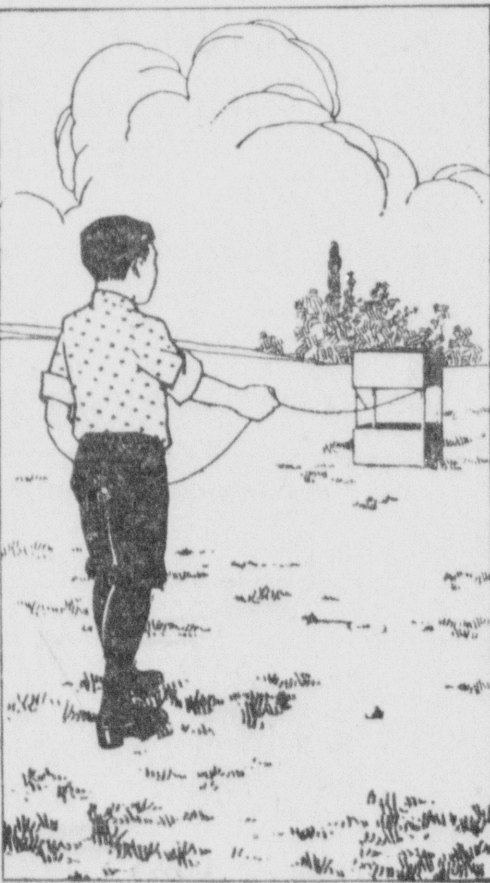

Of the more pretentious kites, none is more popular than the rectangular box-kite. It approaches nearest to the form of the biplane aeroplane of any kite yet devised, and is one of the staidest of fliers.

Boxkites can be purchased ready made in a number of sizes, but they are not cheap, and it will pay any boy to take the time necessary to make one. While their construction requires considerable more work than the monoplane form of kite, it is not difficult, and is so interesting that no boy can fail to enjoy it.

The illustrations show a kite of scientifically developed proportions. Pine, spruce and whitewood are the best materials for making these kites, though any strong, light-weight wood of straight grain may be used if easier to obtain. The horizontal sticks and braces must be cut straight and of uniform thickness, as in the making of any kite. If you live near a lumber yard or planing mill, possibly you can get strips of just the size you require from the waste pile for the mere asking, or for a few cents get them ripped out of a board. If not, you will find it an easy enough matter to cut them yourself, with a sharp rip-saw. Short kite sticks can be whittled straight enough with the jack-knife, but long ones can be cut easier and with greater accuracy with the saw.

Cut the four horizontal sticks  $\frac{3}{8}$  inch thick and  $\frac{3}{4}$  inch wide, by 36 inches long (A, Fig. 2), and the four connecting upright sticks (B, Fig. 2)  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch thick,  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch wide, and 10 inches long. Tack the upright sticks to the horizontal ones, 6 inches from the ends of the latter, as shown in Fig. 2, using slender brads for the purpose, and clinching the projecting ends. In fastening these sticks be careful to set sticks B at right angles to sticks A.

After fastening these sticks together in the form of two frames similar to that shown in Fig. 2, lay them aside until you have prepared the covering for the end boxes, or "cells." For this a light-weight muslin or tough paper should be used. Cheesecloth will do, if after it has been put on you give it a coat of varnish to fill up the pores and make it air tight. The light-weight brown paper so commonly used now for wrapping paper is good covering material.

The band coverings for the kite illustrated should be 10 inches wide and 69 inches long. If of cloth, they should be hemmed along each edge to prevent raveling and to make a firm edge. If of paper, the edges should be folded over a light cord and pasted. Sew together the ends of the cloth bands, or paste the ends of the paper bands, lapping them so that the measurement around the inside will be exactly 68 inches, the proper measurement around the sticks of the finished kite.

Slip the bands over the stick frames, spread the frames to their fullest extent, and hold them in this position by means of sticks sprung in temporarily between upright sticks B. Then measure the proper length for the diagonal braces C (Fig. 3). These sticks should be notched at their ends to fit over the sticks A, as shown in Fig. 4, and they should be a trifle long so they will be slightly bow-shaped when put in place. In this way the frames will keep the cloth or paper bands stretched tight. The notched ends of the diagonals should be lashed with thread to keep them from splitting. Lashings of thread around the frame sticks A, as shown in Figs. 2 and 4, will keep the ends of the braces from slipping away from the uprights B, which is the proper position for them. Bind the braces together at their intersections with thread, as shown in Fig. 1. The cloth or paper bands should be fastened to each horizontal frame stick with two tacks, placed near the edges of the bands. This can be done to best advantage with the diagonal braces removed.

Fig. 1 shows one good attachment for the bridle. Of course, the kite is flown other side up, with the bridle underneath. A good way of attaching the bridle is to slip the loop end through a fancy-work ring, loop it over itself, and then tie the loose ends to sticks A of the framework. The vertical distance between the ring and the kite should be about 3 feet. Three and four point attachments for the kite bridle are used, but the two-point method is generally considered the most satisfactory, and is most commonly employed.

EXPLORED LAND OF MYSTERY

Adventurous Young American Has Traveled Through the Interior of Guatemala.

The recent experience of a young American in the great unknown district of Peten, in Guatemala, has furnished for science one of the most valuable records in years regarding the life of what is perhaps the most ancient race of human beings in existence.

In a trip just completed, in which he spent more than two years in the jungles of a territory whose mystery has for years repelled as well as attracted the adventurous, Russell Hastings Millward, America's youngest explorer, had not only captured the world's mileage record by traveling across more than three thousand miles of unknown country, but has opened up for the merchant and archaeologist a land whose wealth has hitherto only been guessed at, remarks the New York Tribune.

The popular impression that there is no more work for the twentieth century explorer could find no better refutation than in the exploit of this young man. The district of Peten, lying to the westward of British Honduras, between the Caribbean coast and the Bay of Campeche, has been known since time immemorial to all Central Americans as "The Mystery." There Millward has located lakes and mountains whose existence has hitherto been a matter of rumor only. For the first time a white man has penetrated those fastnesses and seen the ruins of temples and palaces which, now overgrown and buried under the foliage of the jungle, were once the centers of magnificent cities. He has not only outlined the extent of the once flourishing empire of the Maya race, but, of importance to the world of commerce, he has practically opened up a new field whose riches will in a few years be one of the chief assets of the Guatemalan government.

Plausible.

Julius Rosenwald, Chicago philanthropist, is a profound believer in civic righteousness.

To a politician who defended certain underhand political methods, Mr. Rosenwald said the other day:

"That's a plausible defense, but it doesn't hold. It's like the defense of the piggyback boy."

"A piggyback boy always used to take at breakfast the bottom piece of toast, which was sure to be kept extra warm by the hot plate beneath it and the hot slices above."

"One morning, as he slipped out the bottom piece as usual, his mother said reproachfully:

"You must stop doing that. Suppose everybody did that—what would happen then?"

"Why, then," said the little boy, "everybody would get a bottom piece."

Ambition of a Henpecked Man.

"I don't know that I desire to rule my wife—I used to feel sometimes as if I wished to, but I have got over it," confessed skimp little Mr. Hennepeck, to the friend of his boyhood. "but once in a while I do kind of have an ambition to be as hoarse as she."

CHRISTMAS GIFTS FOR HER LADYSHIP

Homemade Offerings That Almost Any Woman Would Appreciate

Milady will like the useful little vanity case seen in the illustration which is made of ribbon. Just the proper size to slip in her purse or hand bag.

For this, wide satin ribbon is selected and two pieces of it, with a flat bit of cotton wadding laid between, are stitched together on the edge.

On one side, extending almost halfway across, another piece of ribbon is stitched to form a small pocket into which is slipped a small envelope of rice powder and a soft piece of chamomile with which to apply it.

A small oblong mirror has its edges bound with ribbon and is then sewed fast to the other side of the case.

Very narrow ribbon encircles the case and serves to fasten it together when folded over like a little book. Illustrated is a vanity case of still another variety. The inside of the case is shown, with a pocket and powder puff on one flap and a mirror on the other.

Gift For the House.

It is becoming quite popular to give what is known as a Christmas present to the house—that is, something that is jointly contributed to and enjoyed by all the members of the household.

The charming screen pictured would make a delightful gift of this kind. It is of gold leaf finish and has a top of glass in which are set oval mirrors to reflect the beauty of the apartment in which it is placed.

Pretty Gift For Invalids.

When planning the holiday gifts do not forget the invalid.

Make a bag of dainty flowered silk or cretonne, running inch wide satin ribbon in the top for a draw string and lining it with delicately scented silk.

Have the drawstring very long so it can be hung on the bedpost in easy reach of the invalid's hand without the necessity of her raising herself in bed.

In the bag is a small paper pad, pencil, handkerchief and anything else may need that otherwise would have to be handed to her by an attendant.

Novelties For the Dressing Table.

A charming gift can be easily made from a picture frame. Buy a frame any size you choose, but instead of inserting a picture put in a piece of bright chintz or cretonne. Then buy two small brass handles and attach one to each end of the frame. When this is finished tack a piece of fine felt across the back. This makes as pretty a tray as any one could wish.

Sore Throat Not a Trifling Ailment

Almost every one has had sore throat—will have it again. It is one of our most common ailments and, because it, in itself, is not fatal, is too often looked upon as a small matter, requiring little or no attention.

On the contrary it is a very serious affection because every person with Sore Throat is in danger of Tonsillitis, Quinsy, or Diphtheria and other serious maladies. In fact these diseases are almost invariably preceded by Sore Throat.

The air we breathe, the food we eat, the liquids we drink, all pass through the throat, and if that is diseased infection may be carried to every part of the system. To cure a Sore Throat often means to prevent Diphtheria or one of the other more serious throat diseases. Curing Sore Throat is TONSILINE'S special mission. It is made for that—advertised for that—sold for that one purpose. TONSILINE is the one and only Sore Throat cure which is sold over a large part of the United States.

TONSILINE is so well and so skillfully prepared as a Sore Throat cure that the first dose gives decided relief, and a very few doses cure.

Remember—Sore throat is Nature's danger signal. Keep TONSILINE in the house and be on the safe side of Sore Throat. 25 cents and 50 cents. Hospital Size $1.00. All Druggists.

The bugle call for parade formation on Memorial day is at once a sad and a thrilling thing. What memories it arouses in the heart of the old soldier!

There is now a bugle call for you. It summons you to join the parade of early Christmas shoppers.

If you do not respond instantly, as those heeding the bugle ever should do, the procession will have passed and you will be left.

You will then get into the mixup of the late Christmas shoppers, who are not organized into anything so orderly as a parade, but are simply a mob.

There you are liable to be tramped on, mauled and bruised and without getting anything for your pains.

Answer the Call. Shop Early.

Protected Both Ways.

Two conservative ladies of old fashioned notions were traveling in the west and, becoming interested in a young girl on the train, finally asked why she was making so long a journey alone. They were greatly shocked at her blithe explanation:

"Well, you see, my mother and stepfather live at one end of the journey, and my father and stepmother live at the other. They send me to each other twice a year, so there isn't a bit of danger with four parents all on the lookout!"—New York Times.

Helps a Judge in Bad Fix.

Justice Eli Cherry, of Gillis Mills, Tenn., was plainly worried. A bad sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and had long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer," he wrote. "At last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and was completely cured." Cures burns, boils, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles. 25 cents at The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind. Advertisement.

To Keep Awake in Church.

A minister once told a good way to keep awake in church when inclined to be drowsy. The way was this: Lift one foot a little way from the floor and hold it there. It is impossible to go to sleep when your foot is poised in the air. This remedy, though simple, is very effectual and never fails to keep a person awake.

CHAPTER XII.

Temptation.

WHEN Stuart had seated himself on a luxurious leather covered chair in the little sitting room he gazed into the flickering fire with a feeling of strange excitement.

He could hear Bivens giving orders to his employees about the removal of his millions to the vaults below. It would take hours to complete the task. He could hear the deep vibrant ring of the gold, as the men dumped it into bags.

As he listened to the curious sound he began dimly to realize that the foundations of his life and character were being undermined. There could be no mistake about it, although he had made some brave talk to Bivens' face as he stared at the daring display of his money.

He lifted his eyes from the fire and they rested on an exquisite miniature of Nan which had been painted just after her marriage. He forgot the ten black years of loneliness and struggle. He was standing before her again in all the pride and strength of those last days of passionate longing and bitter rebellion. His heart gave a throb of fierce protest against the fate that had robbed him of the one thing on earth he had ever really desired. He tried in vain to separate her from the struggle of character and principle he was fighting with Bivens.

When Bivens entered he found his tall figure bent low in the chair and a scowl on his face. The little black eyes sparkled with the certainty of victory. He knew the poison was at work and its wine had found the soul.

"Now, Jim, down to business! You can see that I have the cash. What I must have to do the big thing I've dreamed is a right hand man whom I can trust with my money, my body and my soul. He must be a man with brains and farseeing eyes. A man who will fight to the death and be loyal with every breath, who will work day and night, a man of iron nerve, iron muscle and a heart of steel. Come in with me, Jim, for all you're worth, with all your brain and will and personality, without a single reservation and I'll give you a partnership of one fourth interest in my annual income and I'll guarantee that it shall never be less than a million a year."

Stuart sprang to his feet and stared at Bivens, gasping.

"You mean this—are you serious? I expected the offer of a generous salary. Cal, but this is simply stunning."

"I told you I'd make you a proposition so big and generous you couldn't get away from it. But mind you, I've the best reasons for making it. We are entering the last phase of a world struggle for financial supremacy. This country is to be the real center of modern power. We must become and will become quickly the economic masters of the world. When that happens somebody is going to be master here."

Bivens rose and paced back and forth a moment.

"Somebody's going to be master here, Jim," he repeated, "and it's not going to be a mob, the stupid, howling, slobbering thing that clutched at your throat that day in front of my bank."

"No."

"Nor will it be a clumsy soulless corporation called a trust, either, a thing that can be bagdered and bounded by every hungry, thieving politician who gets into office. The coming master of masters, the king of kings will be a man—a man on whose imperial word will hang the fate of empires. I met the king of America the other day in this panic. He sent for me. You can bet I answered the call. He made me eat dirt and swear that I liked the taste of it. But I'll get even with him yet!"

Two livid spots suddenly appeared on the swarthy cheeks and he choked into silence for a moment, continuing:

"The world is waiting for its real master—not a multi-millionaire, but the coming billionaire. The king of kings is yet to come. If I had been ready in this panic with the capital I have today I could have made a billion. With the power and experience I now have and one such man as you on whom I can depend I'd double my fortune every year. That means that in five years I will be a billionaire, and only forty-two."

"A billion dollars will double itself in seven years. At forty-two I'd be worth a billion. At forty-nine I'd have two billions. At fifty-eight I'd be worth four billions—and just old enough to really begin to do things."

"Give me one billion answerable to my will alone and I can rule this nation. Give me four billions and no king or emperor, president or parliament on this globe dare to make peace or war without consulting me."

"How long could this republic stand if such a man should see fit to change its form? Even now our petty millionaires buy courts and legislatures, and the control of great cities. But the new king would know no limitations to this power. If Europe now cringes at the feet of our present millionaire king of Wall street, emperors beg his favor and princes wait at his door, what could the real ruler of the world do?"

Bivens' voice again sank into low passionate whispers, while his black eyes again became two points of fierce gleaming light.

When the crucial moment came for Stuart's manhood to answer the speech of brave denunciation died on his lips. At the door of this yellow empire mightier than kings in purple, his conscience halted, hesitated and stammered. He found himself in spite of honor and character for the moment measuring himself with Bivens in the struggle for supremacy which would sooner or later come between them if he should enter such an alliance.

"You needn't rush your decision, Jim. Take your time. Think it over from every point of view. You're bound to accept it in the end."

Stuart flushed and his hand trembled. "It's no use in my quibbling. Can your offer is a stirring one. It tempts me immensely. I feel the call of the old blood struggle in me. I'm beginning to see now that the world's battles are no longer fought with sword and gun."

"Take your time, Jim," Bivens broke in, fusing. "In the meantime I've got to see more of you. Nan wants it, and I want it. The politicians have turned you down, but the big men who count are afraid of you and they'll go out of their way to meet you. Come up to dinner with us tonight. I want you to make my home your home whether you accept my offer or not."

Stuart hesitated. "Really, Cal, I oughtn't to go to-night. I'm afraid I've let you take too much for granted. I've got to fight this thing out alone. It's the biggest thing physically and morally I've ever been up against. I've got to be alone for awhile."

"Oh, nonsense, be alone as much as you like later. Nan insisted on my bringing you tonight, and you've got to come, to save me from trouble if nothing else. I've an engagement down town after dinner. You and Nan can talk over old times. I promise you faithfully that not a word of business shall be spoken."

Stuart felt the foundations of life slipping beneath his feet and yet he couldn't keep back the answer: "All right, I'll come."

As Stuart dressed for the dinner that night he thought of Harriet with a pang. He had promised her to try to keep out of danger. But could she know or understand the struggle through which he was passing? He wondered vaguely why he had seen so little of her lately. She had become more and more absorbed in her music and her manner had grown shy and embarrassed. Yet whenever he had resented it and stopped to lounge and chat and draw her out, she was always her old sweet self. The doctor, too, had avoided him of late, and he noticed that his clothes had begun to look shabby. He caught him hurrying from the house and laid his hand affectionately on his arm.

"These are tough times, doctor, and if you need any help you must let me know."

The older man's voice trembled as he replied:

"Thank you, my boy, that's a very unusual speech to hear these days. It renews my faith in the world."

"You're not in trouble?"

The doctor lifted his head gently. "My troubles are so much lighter than those of the people I know I can't think of them. So many of my friends and patients have given up in this panic. So many have died for the lack of bread. I'll let you know if I'm in trouble myself."

He paused and pressed Stuart's hand.

"I'm glad you asked me. The sun will shine brighter today. I must hurry."

With a swing of his stalwart form and a generous wave of his hand he was gone.

When Stuart reached the drive he alighted and walked slowly toward the Bivens palace. He had never been there before. He had always avoided the spot. He smiled now at the childishness of his attitude toward Nan.

The full moon had just risen and flooded the drive and park and river with silvery mystery. He studied the effects of the building with wonder and admiration. Evidently Bivens had given his architects a free hand and they had wrought a poem in marble. So fascinated was Stuart with the beauty and perfection of the great house he walked around the block before entering, viewing it from every angle. What a strange thing, this medieval palace, standing in stately beauty in the midst of the hideous, ugly uniformity of the most modern, unromantic and materialistic city of the world! What was its meaning?

Had a new master of the world really been born? Surely his like had never been seen in the history of man—this modern money maniac, this strange creature of iron muscles, at ways hurrying, daring, scheming, plotting, with never a moment's relaxation. Stuart was shown into the drawing room by a powdered flunky whose costume was designed by one of the court tailors of Europe. While awaiting the arrival of the mistress of the house he looked about the room with increasing amazement. He found the perfection of grace, elegance, quiet richness and surprising beauty.

He began to realize for the first time the triumph of the woman who had battered him for gold. His eye rested on a life size portrait of Nan done by the foremost artist of Europe. The artist had caught the secret of her character and expressed it with genius in the poise of the superb form, the incarnation of sensuous, soulless beauty dominated by keen intelligence.

He wondered if she really showed the ten years added to her age. At least he knew that she had not been happy. There was some consolation in that. Her ceaseless efforts to win back his friendship had left no room for doubt. He sank deep into the great chair and silently waited her coming.

When Nan's radiant figure appeared in the doorway, her bare arm extended, her lips parted in a tender smile, Stuart knew that his face was red. The fact that he knew it increased his confusion until the whole room became a blur. Her hand touched his. The shock was sobering; he remembered himself and smiled.

"What a long, long time, Jim!" "A thousand years—I think, Nan," he stammered.

"Nine hundred, to be exact, sir, but better late than never. I began to think your stubbornness would postpone this call until the next world. Mr. Bivens was detained downtown on business. I am awfully sorry he's not here to join in my welcome. But I am disappointed in you."

"Why?" "My vanity is hurt. I expected to find you, after nine years, with deep lines of suffering written on your face. You are better looking than ever. The few gray hairs about your temples are extremely becoming. Your honors have given you a new repose, dignity and reserve power."

"Allow me to return the compliment by saying that you are even a more startling disappointment to me. I was sure that I should find you broken. You are far more beautiful than ever."

The only changes I see merely add to your power—the worldly wisdom which marriage writes on every woman's face, a new strength, a warmth and fascination and a conscious joy at which I wonder and rage."

"Why wonder and rage?" She drew him gently to a seat by her side, leaned forward and gazed smilingly at him.

"When I see you tonight in all this splendor, so insolently happy—"

Nan sprang to her feet, laughing. "You are delicious tonight, Jim, and I'm so glad you are here. Come into the art gallery. It will take you days to see it; we'll just peep in tonight."

He followed her into a stately room packed with masterpieces of art. Stuart gazed a moment in rapture. "You must spend days here, Jim. Now, honestly, with all your high-

"What a long time, Jim!"

browed ideals, wouldn't you like to own this?"

"No. Not if I had the wealth of Croesus."

"Why not?"

"It's a crime to rob the world of these masterpieces of genius. They should be the free inheritance and inspiration of all the children of men."

Nan gazed at Stuart in vague bewilderment and then a mischievous smile crept into the corners of her mouth.

"You're trying to throw dust in my eyes, but I can tell you what you are really thinking. You are really wondering why the wicked prosper."

"You are wrong," he replied slowly. "Why the wicked prosper has never worried me in the least. The first big religious idea I ever got hold of was that this is the best possible world God could have created—because it's free. Man must choose, otherwise his deeds have no meaning. A deed of mine is good merely because I have the power to do its opposite if I choose. In this free world, step by step, I can rise or fall through suffering and choosing."

"Oh, Jim," Nan broke in softly, "I've made you suffer horribly. You have the right to be hard and bitter." He looked at Nan cautiously and began to study her every word and movement and weigh each accent. Did she mean what her words and tones implied? In a hundred little ways more eloquent than speech she had said to him tonight that the old love of the morning of life was still the one living thing. He put her to little tests to try the genuineness of her feeling. He threw off his restraint and led her back to the scenes of their youth. When dinner ended she was leaning close, her eyes misty with tears, and a faraway look in them that told of memories more vivid and alluring than all the splendors of her palace.

Stuart drew a breath of conscious triumph, and his figure suddenly grew tense with a desperate resolution. But only for a moment.

He frowned, looked at his watch and rose abruptly. "I must be going, Nan," he said with sudden coldness.

"Why, Jim," she protested, "it's only 10 o'clock. I won't hear of such a thing."

"Yes, I must," he persisted. "I've an important case tomorrow. I must work tonight."

"You shall not go," Nan cried. "I've waited nine years for this one evening's chat with you. Come into the music room, sit down and brood as long as you like. I've planned to charm you with an old accomplishment of mine tonight."

She led him to a rich couch, piled the pillows high, made him snug, drew a harp near the other end and began to tune its strings.

Stuart gazed at the paintings on the ceiling and in a moment was lost in visions of the future his excited fancy began to weave.

A voice whispered: "Unless you are a coward, grasp the power that is yours by divine right of nature. Why should you walk while pygmies ride? Why should you lag behind the age in this fierce struggle for supremacy? The woman who sits before you is yours if you only dare to tear her from the man who holds her by the fiction of dying customs!" He felt his heart throb as another voice within cried:

"Yet why should I, an heir to immortality, whose will can shape a world, why should I live a beast of prey with my hand against every man?"

The answer was the memory of dirty finger nails clogging on his throat while a mob of howling fools surged over his body and cursed him for trying to save them from themselves. Again he heard a woman's voice as she held his head close, whispering:

"I've something to say to you, Jim." His lips tightened with sudden decision. The golden gates of the forbidden land swung open, and his soul entered.

LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEER HAS REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE.

I have been thinking that a word from me would benefit those who may be suffering as I was before I began taking your Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. I am a locomotive engineer, employed on the Tyrone & Clearfield Branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Three years ago I was afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble so bad that I was compelled to lay off duty from my engine and was in the care of two doctors. However their medicine did not benefit me. One day, I noticed your advertisement, to send name and address for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root. At this time my trouble had reached a serious stage. I sent for the sample bottle and in three days received a small bottle of Swamp-Root, which I took according to directions, and by the time I had taken the contents, I could pass water more freely. I was so pleased with my experiment that I sent my wife to the drug store of W. H. Milick, Philipsburg, Pa., and secured a one-dollar bottle. I continued taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root until I was entirely cured. Now whenever I feel any pain or soreness after being exposed to bad weather or hard work, I take a dose or two of Swamp-Root. I cannot recommend this remedy too highly, especially to brother engineers who are more or less troubled with their kidneys (more than any other class of men.)

Yours truly,

THE THANKSGIVING BIRD.

GOOD turkeys have plump breasts, white flesh and black legs. Hen turkeys are generally the best. A young gobble has small spurs.

Fifteen minutes to the pound is the time allowed for roasting a young turkey. An older turkey takes more time. It should be roasted slowly and basted often.

After the turkey is trussed its skin should be wet, and it should be well dredged with flour and sprinkled with salt and pepper.

Two Savory Roasts.

Turkey With Chestnut Dressing.—Take an eight pound turkey, bake two and one-half hours. After the turkey has been washed and singed prepare the dressing as follows: Remove the shell from a pint of chestnuts. Cook in slightly salted water until tender. Then drain, skin and chop. Add to the nuts a half loaf of stale bread put through the food chopper, one-quarter of a pound of butter, salt and pepper to taste and one egg. Mix all together, adding a little warm water if it seems too dry. Garnish with luk sausage fried a light brown. For the gravy—as usual, just before dishing up add one pint of oysters. Simmer until the edges curl.

Turkey a la Creole.—The creoles have a unique method of roasting their fowl. They cover it with a thick paste of flour and water, and about twenty minutes before serving they remove the crust and cover the fowl with slices of bacon. The fowl is deliciously juicy.

A Foreign Process.

Turkey German Style.—Singe and draw the turkey. Wash it in cold water and wipe with a clean towel. Season inside with half a teaspoonful of salt. Make the dressing and fill the crop and inside of the body with it. Sew the turkey up, twist the wings over its back and run a skewer through the thighs into the body. Pass a string across the back of the bird, crossing it below the breast; then catch it over the point of the skewer, cross the string again and tie it on the back.

Rub one tablespoonful salt all over the turkey and lay in a roasting pan. Spread two ounces butter over the breast, then place the pan in a medium hot oven to roast. Turn often and baste freely with its own gravy till the bird is light brown on all sides. Add one cupful boiling water; continue to roast, basting frequently till done, which will take about two and a half hours, or you may allow fifteen minutes to a pound.

Serve with giblet sauce.

Anna Thompson!

FARMERS' SHORT COURSE

Is Helpful in Giving New Ideas to the Farmers.

The farmers' short course which will be given here by Purdue University on November 21-23, inclusive, will be a benefit in giving new ideas to the farmers.

"Our efforts," says Prof. G. I. Christie, head of the Agricultural Extension Department at Purdue University, "to arouse interest in agricultural education among the farmers of this state are meeting with a gratifying response. Our large agricultural possibilities and advantages are better understood by the people than ever before. It is being realized that Purdue has a very large amount of valuable, practical, usable information, to offer, concerning the improving of our soils, growing field crops, more and better livestock, the improving and enlarging of our dairy herds, the growing of larger quantities of good fruit, and the improving of our rural conditions generally. Prejudice against Purdue is gradually disappearing because the application of knowledge gained here from experimental work, investigation and study along agricultural lines is resulting in better land, better crops, greater profits, a good education and more comfort for the children in the homes." "We have reason to be proud," says Prof. Christie, "of our advancement but we are only fairly started on our great task of developing Indiana's agricultural resources and of realizing some of our agricultural possibilities."

The Agricultural Extension Department has on foot a dozen or more agencies intended to convey to the farmer information that will aid him to farm with more profit and satisfaction. Just at this time it is announced that what are known as the Farmers' Short Courses in Agriculture are being arranged for. The demand for these schools is much greater than can be met with the funds at the disposal of the Department. Nearly all the courses that can be handled by the Department are now provided for in different parts of the state. It is hoped that through these courses 20,000 will be reached directly. During November and December six courses will be given, one at Seymour, Nov. 21-22-23, one at New Albany, Nov. 25-26-27, one at Corydon, Dec. 2-3-4, one at Huntingburg, Dec. 5-6-7, one at Rockport, Dec. 9-10-11, and one at Princeton, Dec. 12-13-14. These courses are three days in length. The twenty or more agricultural lectures and as many demonstrations are given by eight lecturers and demonstrators from the staff of Purdue University. A carload of high class livestock and other teaching material is in readiness for the work. Many Short Courses are lined up at this time for January and February. Only a few more applications for Courses could be considered.

These courses have proved to be a popular and an effective means of aiding the farmers of our state, and of meeting them in their own communities for the discussion of agricultural matters of vital interest and importance. These occasions are bound to be mutually beneficial. They are bound to grow in popularity and usefulness. The courses should be attended not by farmers only but by as many as possible who are not farmers. Thus, doubtless, there would be fostered a better understanding between producer and consumer, and a closer union of all forces for the upbuilding of our state and for supplying many of its needs.

PIPE ORGAN RECITAL

Heard by a Large and Appreciative Audience at St. Paul Church.

The organ recital and musical at St. Paul's church Tuesday evening was attended by a large audience, between 300 and 400 people, who were delighted with the splendid program, which was rendered. Prof. W. S. Sterling, Dean of the Metropolitan School of Music at Cincinnati, gave five numbers of the program and his performance was greatly appreciated by the audience. Among the best numbers which he rendered were "Idylle" by Faulkes, "Meditation" by Mailey, "Traumerei" by Schumann and "March Solenne" by Gounod. The closing number, "Fantasie-Tannhauser" by Wagner with Mrs. Russell Sanders at the piano and Prof. Sterling at the organ was exceptionally fine.

A number of local people assisted in the musical. The tries by Messdames Frank Voss, August Cordes, Jr., and T. R. Carter were especially pleasing to the audience. One of the best numbers on the program was a vocal solo, "The Dream" by Miss Adda Gasaway, accompanied by piano, violin and organ. Estel Hancock's cello solo, "Humoreske" was an excellent number and was heartily appreciated. Miss Frieda Aufderheide displayed her marked talent in the rendition of "Il Trovatore." Miss Alma Massman of Cincinnati rendered two solos, which were highly appreciated. Miss Massman, formerly lived in Seymour, and her friends are always glad to hear her.

St. Paul church is to be congratulated on bringing to Seymour and arranging such an excellent musical program and our people are to be congratulated on the large attendance which they gave to so excellent a program.
